

Nine Energy Service Implements Proactive Driver Risk Management

The Challenge

With over 1,500 employees, Nine Energy Service (Nine) struggled to maintain an active list of individuals driving personal vehicles on company time. From commercial vehicle operators driving daily to other employees driving for company-related activities, it was critical to have insight on all employee driving behavior to ensure the integrity of their highway safety program.

Nine was manually reviewing motor vehicle records (MVRs) on an annual basis to identify and address high-risk driving behavior. Between reviews, they relied on self-reporting for incidents such as crashes and license suspensions due to administrative reasons. Many times, employees themselves weren't even aware their license had been suspended.

Nine is categorized as a transportation company by their insurance provider, resulting in greater liability and higher premium rates. With insurance rates rising, they were interested in curbing future rate increases and ensuring they were aiding in keeping the roadways safe.

“When people fell outside of our safety policy, it was typically for administrative reasons like a license being suspended for non-payment of child support or a CDL downgrade because someone didn't self-certify their new med card. These were things we wouldn't have known about prior to SambaSafety.”

The Solution

During a company-imposed mock DOT audit, the auditor recommended utilizing continuous driver monitoring to alleviate the burden of MVR reviews. Zurich, Nine's insurance provider, also recommended SambaSafety as a resource to better ensure all employees meet their safety criteria at any given time.

The Results

To simplify the process of managing their entire driver list, Nine began monitoring all employees, not just DOT-regulated drivers, using SambaSafety. This provides unmatched insight into the driving behavior of their entire employee base, enabling them to proactively address issues as they appear in SambaSafety's comprehensive Qorta platform.

Using Zurich's criteria, Nine developed a custom scoring system. At first, managers were only notified when drivers reached the red category at which point, they were disqualified from driving. "A big a-ha moment for us was to notify managers when someone fell into the orange category. This led to proactive intervention, enabling managers to have a conversation and implement additional training with the driver, preventing future disqualifications."

Continuous driver monitoring and a proactive intervention strategy contributed to Nine's overall improvement of their motor vehicle safety program. As a result, Nine has been able to avoid significant increases in premiums when renegotiating their insurance rates.

WHY SAMBASAFETY?

1. Simplified process for managing and tracking all employee driver behavior.
2. Violations big or small never fall through the cracks as Nine is alerted of all incidents in SambaSafety.
3. Management can proactively intervene when drivers receive violations, helping reduce future disqualifications.

"As a Department of Transportation (DOT) regulated motor carrier, it is our responsibility to know the license status of all our drivers. It's reassuring to know that we can now sit in front of a DOT auditor with assurance that even if our drivers don't self-report, we'll still know about incidents and violations."
